MERVIN BENDER KILLS HIMSELF

Well Known Gettysburg Man Worries about Business and Takes his Life by Shooting. Rash Act Committed at his Home.

Mervin Bender shot and instantly killed himself at his home on Baltimore street about six o'clock this morning. Business worries are believed to have been the cause for the act.

Mr. Bender recently purchased the Spangler warehouse and sold his home on Baltimore street. The business at the warehouse is known to have caused him considerable anxiety and only Monday evening he told Mrs. Bender that he regretted his recent business transaction. He had been unusually worried for several days and even casual acquaintances noticed that he was depressed about something, but did not suspect any serious trouble.

Monday evening he was specially restless and worried. This morning he ate breakfast early with his family and then went out to the woodshed at the rear of his home and a minute later the fatal shot was heard. Mrs. Bender, rushing to the place, found her husband lying face down with the revolver at his side. A bullet hole on each side of his head showed where the ball had penetrated one temple and gone out the other. A handkerchief had been tied about his eyes.

Mrs. Bender ran to the street and called for help which was at once at hand as many people had heard the shot and did not know what had happened. Doctors Stewart and Diehl were summoned but death had resulted instantly and they could be of no assistance.

That the suicide was committed with due thought is shown by the fact of the handkerchief while a remark of Mr. Bender's the night before now seems to have a significance which was not attached to it at the time. Mrs. Bender noticed his revolver which he had about the house and said that she thought the cartridges should be removed as their little son might get hold of the weapon and hurt himself. "I'll take them out tomorrow," was Mr. Bender's reply. Only one chamber was empty when the revolver was found at his side.

The news of the suicide spread with remarkable rapidity and all over town the most sincere sympathy was expressed for the relatives of the man who had many friends in Gettysburg.

Mervin Bender was a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bender and was born in Straban township 46 years ago. For some years he conducted the dairy business of the Bender farm along the Harrisburg road and later came to town where for a number of years he had charge of the warehouse of the Gettysburg Department Store, filling that position with ability until a few weeks ago when he purchased the Spangler warehouse. He was a member of St. James Lutheran church. Surviving are his mother, Mrs. John Bender, of this place; his wife, who was Miss Sallie Leivelsperger, a daughter, Catharine, and a son, Charles. The following brothers and sisters also survive, Edward M., and Harry B. Bender, Mrs. Daniel Snyder, Mrs. Charles Toot, of Gettysburg; Mrs. John H. Meyer, of Jersey City, New Jersey; George Bender, of Straban township.

Funeral from his late home on Thursday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Interment in New Oxford cemetery, Rev. J. B. Baker officiating. The interment will be private.

GEORGE THORN WORRIED

As the time for election draws nearer and nearer George D. Thorn, chief clerk to the Secretary of the Commonwealth, grows more and more anxious. He cannot send out the official ballots to the county commissioners until the courts hand down their decisions on the various election questions now pending and the later they are held the harder it will be to have the ballots out in time for the various counties to get their ballots printed before the election—Harrisburg Star Independent.

We have an opening for a high class salesman to represent us in Adams County with a quick selling, money making proposition. Will make a contract with the man possessing the proper qualifications. Address for particulars Box No. 311. The Gettysburg Times.

MERCHANTS SUE D. B. CARROLL

Gettysburg Retail Merchants Association Brings Suit against Hotel Man for Contribution to National Guard Encampment Fund.

The Retail Merchants' Association this morning brought suit through J. L. Williams, Esq., against D. B. Carroll, of the Hotel Gettysburg, to recover $100 subscription to the National Guard encampment fund. The case will be heard by Justice of the Peace Harnish on October 26.

This case is the first of a number which will likely be instituted later on if subscriptions made prior to the encampment are not paid, action favoring that course having been adopted at a recent meeting of the Association.

In securing this year's subscriptions for the big August attraction the committee which solicited local business and hotel people were met with a number of refusals to sign notes for the amount they promised to contribute but the Association is of the opinion that the subscriptions can be collected by suit with little more trouble than if notes were held.

Since the encampment, when efforts were made to collect the subscriptions, the committee met with a number of rebuffs and a number of the hotel and other people refused to pay their promised contributions. Authority was consequently given to institute suit where advisable to collect the necessary funds to meet the town contribution to make sure the encampment.

ON ADAMS COUNTY APPLES

The Harrisburg Patriot comments on Adams County's apple crop as follows:

Hundreds of carloads of apples are being shipped through Harrisburg from points off the Cumberland Valley and the Gettysburg and Harrisburg Railroads. The apple season is now at its height so far as the shipments are concerned, and from the number going through this city the season in Franklin and Adams counties has been the biggest in recent years.

The apples are being sent to all parts of the United States. Almost every day several carloads are billed as far west as Chicago, while quite a number are being sent to Akron, Ohio. Others are sent East, many shipments being made to Philadelphia, New York and Baltimore.

The kinds of apples raised through that section consist of the Imperial, Baldwin, Pound and the Green apple. A train load of Imperial apples, which are large red ones, makes a very pretty sight.

The orchards are the most numerous along the Gettysburg and Harrisburg Railroad and the shipments coming to Harrisburg en route to points East and West are the heaviest in many years. The season has also been good throughout Franklin county but the orchards are much more scattered.

LITTLE BOY RUN OVER BY TEAM

Stanley Tipton, Young Son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Tipton, has Wagon Go over his Head. Expected to Recover fully.

Stanley Tipton, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Lee Tipton, of East Middle street, was knocked down by a horse and run over on Monday evening, both wheels of the vehicle passing over his face and head. The boy is not thought to be seriously injured, however, and his complete recovery is expected.

The little boy was playing in front of the home of Mr. Lightner at the corner of East Middle street and East Confederate avenue when his mother called him to supper. He ran across the street and right into the horse of H. T. Weaver, driven by Mr. Pheasant. The lad was knocked down and before the driver could stop the horse both wheels had gone over his head.

Mr. Pheasant and several others took the boy into the house and a hurried examination showed that no bones had been crushed, due to the fact that the wagon was a very light one.

The boy spent a restful night and is getting along nicely.

ANOTHER AUTO RUN TO COME

Motor Club of Harrisburg to Send Another Automobile Run through Gettysburg this Fall. Latter Part of November the Time.

The Motor Club of Harrisburg will hold its first fall reliability and economy contest to Gettysburg and other points on November 21 and 22 with a run of 180 miles each day. The action endorsing a fall run was taken at a meeting of the board of governors Monday evening. There have been numerous requests from agents and manufacturers for a contest in this section during the present season and the club has decided to have a contest that will test the durability of the 1911 cars and will offer the agents a splendid opportunity of exploiting their cars in their selling territory.

On the first day it is proposed to have the run from Harrisburg to York over the mountain road on the Cumberland and York county side of the Susquehanna river, and from York to Hanover, to Littlestown, to Gettysburg, to Hagerstown, to Chambersburg, Newville, Carlisle and back to Harrisburg. On the second day the run will go to Lebanon, Pine Grove, Pottsville, Mahanoy City, Shenandoah, Ashland, Mt. Carmel, Shamokin, Williamsport, Tower City, Lykens, Elizabethtown, Millersburg, Halifax and down through Dauphin to Harrisburg.

Full arrangements will be made at a meeting of the contest committee in a short time. The pathfinders will survey the route through the coal regions on Wednesday and Thursday of next week and will follow up the Maryland end during the latter part of the same week.

'DON'T LET THE GIRLIES GET YOU'

That's the theme that runs through the song of that name now being sung with immense success in the great musical farce, "Alma, Where Do You Live?"

The words of the song are by George V. Hobart, the well known author, while Jean Briquet is given credit for the music.

This is the song and the play that is drawing the crowds to Weber's Theatre, New York City.

And it is this song—the words and music complete—that will go free as a special feature with each copy of next Sunday's New York World.

A great newspaper and a great song for a few cents. Order a copy from your newsdealer in advance.

Many a creamery, whether private or co-operative, might greatly increase its business and render a very real service to the farmers of the community patronizing it if the manager, buttermaker or directors—one or all—would take the lead in encouraging the patrons of the creamery to use the Babcock test and weigh their milk for the purpose of weeding out the cows that are not paying for their keep or at best yield but a paltry and unsatisfactory return. A creamery of this character, sustaining as it does a supervisory relation to the dairies of the community, could very appropriately take up this work, and the good results which would come from such a well directed cow testing campaign could hardly be measured. In many states wide awake dairymen have voluntarily formed such cow testing associations, and the results attained have been most satisfactory.

ARIZONA ROAD RUNNER.

A Sociable Bird That Is Said to Hate a Rattlesnake.

The road runner is one of Arizona's distinctive ornithological institutions. It is a long legged, long billed bird, slender of build and standing some ten inches high. It is not often seen in the farming districts, but is a familiar sight on the desert.

It has gained the name of road runner from its habit of taking the road in front of travelers be they on horseback or wheeled conveyance, and running swiftly or slowly, as occasion requires, showing off its neighborly spirit and running qualities. It is not uncommon for it to keep in company of the traveler for several hundred yards.

No resident of Arizona would kill a road runner. It is firmly believed that the bird is the deadly enemy of that monster of the desert, the rattlesnake. We don't know whether any of our readers ever saw a road runner kill a rattlesnake. If there is an authentic story of such a thing we would be glad to publish it. But the accepted tradition is that the road runner and the rattlesnake are deadly enemies and that the rattlesnake fears the road runner beyond anything else.

It is told that the bird drives the snake into a coil and then, darting around the serpent like lightning, pecks it to death. Whatever truth there may be in the stories of the road runner's accomplishments as a disciple of St. Patrick, it deserves the friendly protection it receives. Its quaint sociability is always a diversion for the lonesome desert traveler.

BRAINY BABY.

John Stuart Mill Was a Genius at Three Years of Age.

At three years of age John Stuart Mill began the study of Greek, with "arithmetic as an evening relaxation." At eight he began Latin, Euclid and algebra and had to act as tutor to the younger children. He was a stern and efficient tutor.

At twelve he began scholastic logic and political economy—the latter his main lifework. At fourteen, while paying a long visit to Sir Samuel Bentham in southern France, he learned French as a relaxation from studying two or three hours before breakfast, five hours between breakfast and dinner and two or three in the evening. Being for the time master of his own hours and not subject to a stern father, he took lessons also in his spare hours in music, singing, dancing, fencing and riding, but never became proficient.

At sixteen Mill could speak in debate with adults with ease and freedom. At eighteen he contributed to the Westminster Review. At twenty-one he was made assistant in the India office and received a large salary for those days.

But Mill was bald at twenty-two. He did not marry until he was forty-five. He himself said: "I never was a boy. It is better to let nature have its own way."

The Green Flash of Sunset.

One of the most rarely witnessed of natural phenomena, but one that has often been discussed at scientific meetings and that always awakens wonder when seen, is the so called "green flash" occasionally visible at the moment of the disappearance of the sun behind a clear horizon. The observer's eye must be fixed upon the rim of the sun as it disappears in order to catch the phenomenon. One authority tells us that he has seen the green flash, although rarely, at the instant of the setting of a bright star. Among the explanations offered is one based upon the optical principle of complementary colors. If one looks at the sun and then closes the eyes a green disk will be perceived. A sensitive eye might be similarly affected by a brilliant star.

He Took the Blame.

"The guilty man always gives himself away," said a detective, "for, like the chap who bought the forty-cent bathing suit, he can't hide his guilty conscience. The chap I have in mind entered the water at Atlantic City in a forty-cent suit of blue flannel. As he splashed about he was joined by a girl friend. The girl flashed her bright eyes over the tumbling expanse of sea and then with a sigh of delight she said:

"Isn't the water blue today?"

"It's shameful," said the man, with a hot blush: "it's perfectly shameful how this cheap bathing flannel runs!"

ATHLETICS WIN FIRST GAME

BENDER IN GREAT FORM

Indian's Superb Pitching, Added to Timely Hitting, Gave Mackmen the Victory—Baker's Great Stick Work.

Philadelphia, Oct. 18.—Not in years has anything attracted so great interest in the Quaker City as the first game of the world's series between the Athletics, winners of the American league race, and the Chicago "Cubs," who landed the National league bunting.

From early dawn until the umpire announced "Play ball," there were streams of people from all directions with one idea in mind, and that was to reach Shibe park. At the beginning of the game there were nearly 27,000 people in the inclosure and 10,000 or 12,000 on the outside clamoring for admission.

Half an hour before the game started all the ticket offices were closed and only a few pasteboards were left in the hands of speculators. Tickets at any price were snatched up. Four dollars was demanded and paid for $1 bleacher seats, and the 50 cent cards calling for standing room in the field brought $1 and $1.50. The speculators were not molested by the police.

The day was ideal for base ball. One would think it was the middle of May instead of the middle of October. Two teams were never more evenly matched than the contestants of yesterday, and each were in the pink of condition. There were but three errors which marred an otherwise perfect game, but the magnificent pitching of the Indian Chief Bender caused the Chicago "Cubs" to bow to defeat, with the score of 4 to 1. Experts from all over the country were free in their statements that a better base ball game could not be witnessed, not one decision being disputed.

Chicago Outplayed.

The Athletics yesterday, however, were superior in every department of the game. The great prowess of Kling was equalled by the reliable Thomas, each man nailing two that attempted to steal second. The pitching of Bender, however, was far superior to that of Overall, who took in, pitched a masterly game, only one hit being made while he was on the mound, a beautiful double against the right field made by Baker.

Three hits did the Indian give Chicago, and two of these three with a fumble of Strunk's in the ninth gave the "Cubs" their lone tally. Joe Tinker romped in with this single score.

There were sporting writers from every large city in the country, and two, Jose C. Perez, sporting editor of Le Discusion, Havana, and Victor Munoz, Redactor de Sports, El Mundo, Havana, who traveled all the way from Cuba to cover the world's series for their respective papers.

The features of the game were the fielding of Collins, the batting of Baker and the superb pitching of the Chippewa Indian, Charles Bender. Today is another day, and the fortunes of war may be with the "Cubs."

The official attendance was 26,891, and the total receipts $37,424.50. The national commission will receive 10 per cent, or $3,742.45. The players receive 60 per cent or $20,209.23, and the club owners 30 per cent, or $13,472.82.

How to Look Pleasant.

By her gracious and cordial manner the wife of a western senator has long charmed those so fortunate as to attend her delightful "functions."

On one such occasion a close friend was alluding to the hostess' graceful method of making every one feel at home. "How on earth do you manage to do it?" the friend asked.

"Oh, it's easy enough," replied the woman with the engaging manner.

BURGLARS STEAL WATCH DOG

Also Took $95 From Trousers of Animal's Owner.

Middletown, N. Y., Oct. 18.—Some unusually mean burglars visited the home of Bernard Levinson, on Benton avenue, this city, and after stealing $95 from Mr. Levinson's trousers, which were on a chair, on leaving also stole the family watch dog.

Mr. Levinson is a merchant. He and his wife and his brother and wife were the occupants of the house. The burglars visited the rooms in which both brothers were sleeping, ransacked the dresser and got away without any of the family hearing them.

CUBA IS SWEPT BY GREAT CYCLONE

Harbor Strewn With Wreckage and Many Lives Lost.

Havana, Oct. 18.—The cyclone that struck the island Sunday increased during the night, its velocity becoming appalling. It is considered far more serious than the hurricane of 1906, which cost many lives and damage of millions of dollars.

The gale came from the southwest with a violence not experienced before in a long time. Rain fell in torrents.

In the city proper the damage was largely confined to the unroofing of buildings. Few persons were injured.

Wire communication with the interior is cut off and the situation outside this city is in doubt. The town of Batabano is said to be under water to a depth of many feet. A large number of lives have been lost there, according to reports.

A report from Regla, across the harbor, says that many persons have been killed there.

It is rumored that a great number of sailors and longshoremen have been drowned in the harbor.

It is probable that the most fatalities and the greatest monetary damage has been done in Pinar del Rio, rich in sugar and tobacco.

Casablanca, across the harbor, is flooded and the residents are taking refuge in the hills behind the town.

The dredge which has been working alongside the wreck of the battleship Maine broke from her moorings and has been carried out to sea. The dredge has on board the foremast, chains and other relics from the American warship.

WOMAN'S THROAT SLASHED

Black Arrested on Charge of Murder on Farm.

Bellefonte, Pa., Oct. 18.—Mrs. John Baudis, of Scotia, was found in a cornfield near her home, with her throat cut from ear to ear.

Bert Dellig, colored, was arrested, charged with her murder. About a month ago Mr. Baudis, while operating a merry-go-round in Williamsport, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head.

Inheritance Tax Stands.

Washington, Oct. 18.—The United States supreme court refused a rehearing in the Hertz-Woodman case. And thus the Spanish-American war tax on inheritances from testators who died in the year immediately preceding July 1, 1902, becomes collectable.

WIRELESS HUNTS WELLMAN AIRSHIP

No Word From Him Since Noon Sunday.

ALL RECORDS ARE BROKEN

If Balloon Is Still Sailing She Has Been in the Air Over 75 Hours. Wellman's Son-in-Law Hopeful.

New York, Oct. 18.—The wireless people fished the air all day and night for Walter Wellman and the balloon America, but there was no answer to the incessant call, "Wn, Wn, Wn," strident from steamships in the North Atlantic lanes and from the many public and private stations along the coast.

At the rate Wellman and his crew were sending along the America, the airship, if still aloft, should have been off Sable Island, Nova Scotia, last night, but the Marconi station at Campdown, Nova Scotia, couldn't connect up with Jack Irwin, the wireless operator of the America. Wireless word has been received from twenty-five Atlantic liners, none of which mentioned the America, although all of them, presumably, had been calling to Irwin for a tip as to his whereabouts.

From Nantucket to Cape Race the wireless operators logged ships who asked for news, but had no news to give. Many of them were in positions where they might have been expected to hook up aials with the America, but they knew nothing.

With no word from Wellman since 12:40 p. m. on Sunday, when Jack Irwin flashed that all was well, the friends of the America's crew are getting anxious. There was absolutely no indication as to where the dirigible had veered, whether she was still pecking away toward Ireland or whether she had dropped somewhere on top of the United States or in Canada's basement.

All Records Broken.

If the America is still sailing she has beaten all records for continuous flight of dirigibles, possibly all records for endurance by gas bags. Count Zeppelin on May 31, 1909, sailed his dirigible thirty-eight hours, from Friedrichshafen to Bitterfeld and return, traveling more than 850 miles. At noon today, if the America is still going, her captain, Melville Vaniman, had sailed her 75 hours and 47 minutes. At Atlantic City Wellman's backers were figuring that he had traveled at least 1000 miles.

They knew that Wellman would decide whether to head across toward Europe or turn around and scout for the hanger that is kept warm for him at Atlantic City. Wellman told them before he was pushed off on Saturday morning that he would start back for Atlantic City the moment that he and his men decided that the voyage to Europe was impracticable. Leroy Chamberlain, Wellman's son-in-law, said:

Thinks They Reached New Foundland.

"So far as we can make out by a study of the maps and charts which we have, the America has reached a point where it can be decided whether there is a chance to reach Europe. It is almost safe to say that this decision is being reached now or will be reached within the next few hours by the men on board the America. I believe that the America at nightfall was off St. Pierre, New Foundland, and had turned east almost directly in the transatlantic steamship lane. We are confident that some message showing our calculations to be correct will soon reach one of the wireless stations."

Wellman asked President Salus, of the Atlantic City syndicate that is backing the venture, to keep the America's hanger up and ready for him. Lots of folks along the boardwalk and around the hotels were betting that Wellman would reach the hanger before he did Ireland. They were willing to hand it to Wellman, and especially Vaniman, for an apparently sincere attempt to reach Europe by the air route, but they were betting that nothing much would happen.

TEN BALLOONS IN RACE

International Contest From St. Louis Is Now On.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 18.—Ten monster racing balloons, representing four countries, flew from the aero grounds here, in the annual international race for which the prizes were the James Gordon Bennett cup and $1750.

All starting heavy, with the exception of Schaeck and Armbruster in the Helvetia, which got away light and sought a better air lane at an altitude of 2500 feet, the ten balloons headed north by northwest or north when they left the ascension grounds. The balloons starting last had not only the advantage of the twilight and cool gas, but also of a better direction, for as, one by one, the aerostats rose they pointed more and more to the north.

Ten balloons are in the contest, representing besides France, America, Switzerland and Germany, the last to get away being the Germania, which got away by moonlight, when all but two balloons had disappeared in the northwest.

JULIA WARD HOWE, FAMED POET, DEAD

Author of "Battle Hymn of the Republic" Passes Away.

WAS NINETY-ONE YEARS OLD

Her Death Was Due to Old Age, Which, With a Cold, Weakened Her Heart—Wrote For Fifty Years.

Middletown, R. I., Oct. 18.—Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, poet and patriot, and the writer of the famous "Battle Hymn of the Republic," passed peacefully away at her summer home, "Oak Glen," in Middletown.

Mrs. Howe had been ill since Wednesday last, when she had a severe chill. Death was due to old age, which, with a cold, weakened her heart. She was in her ninety-second year.

On Sunday Mrs. Howe appeared to be recovering from her cold, but continued to remain in bed. Monday her condition changed suddenly for the worse and she lapsed into unconsciousness, which ended in death.

At her bedside were her three daughters, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, Mrs. Laura Elizabeth Richards and Mrs. John Elliot, with her husband.

Julia Ward Howe, the Grand Old Woman of American literature, will always be remembered as the author of the famous "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Mrs. Howe was the daughter of Samuel Ward, a prominent New York banker, and was born in New York city on May 27, 1819. Her mother was a descendant of the distinguished General Marion, of Revolutionary fame, and was a highly cultivated woman, who inculcated in her daughter the love of poetry at an early age.

Mrs. Howe soon became proficient in several ancient and modern languages and in music. When twenty-four she was married to Dr. Samuel S. Howe, of Boston. An extended tour abroad followed, during which they visited England, Ireland, the Italian lakes, Rome, Florence and Paris.

About this time Mrs. Howe commenced to write poetry, and a few years after her return, in 1842, brought out "Passion Flowers," her first book. Her literary work once started, continued for over half a century, during which time she produced a great many poems and a number of magazine articles.

She also wrote an excellent biography of Margaret Fuller, published in 1883. "Modern Society" was a scathing analysis of some of the ideals and practices which are more or less prevalent in this country. "From the Oak to the Olive" was a book of European travel, and a companion volume was "A Trip to Cuba." Her books of poetry included "Words for the Hour" (1856), "Later Lyrics" (1866) and "From Sunset Ridge" (1898). A book of her "Reminiscences" appeared in 1899 and proved very interesting reading, as she had met a number of distinguished people in her long career.

But her popular fame rests on the famous "Battle Hymn of the Republic," the song of the Civil War. It is sung to the tune of "John Brown," and commences: "Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord." Mrs. Howe wrote it early one morning. The night before she had been out riding in the country near Washington and her party had narrowly escaped being captured by a troop of Confederates.

As they came into Washington they sang "John Brown's Body," and the tune kept ringing in Mrs. Howe's head all night. When she awoke before daylight she began to make verses to it.

It was first published at Charlestown, Mass. Captain James Greenleaf, an organist of the Harvard church, set the notes for the music, and a Massachusetts regiment made them first noted by singing them at Fort Warren in 1861.

Hunter Accidentally Shot.

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 18.—According to word received here from Old Forge in the Adirondacks, Charles A. Dodge, of Springfield, Mass., was killed at Red river, ten miles south of the head of Fourth lake, just as he was about to go on a runaway to watch for deer. Within a few minutes after the party had started, Sam Brakey, the guide, saw a partridge. He raised his rifle and fired. The bird dropped with a bullet through its body. The ball sped on to a boulder, glanced and struck Dodge, who was standing five rods away. The ball entered his abdomen and he was dead in a few minutes.

Beat Affair; Couple Gone.

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 18.—Howard Jones, son of Rev. R. T. Jones, of this city, and Miss Grace Hillacl, a telephone operator, were for a moonlight row on Lake Cayuga Sunday evening. Their boat was found floating two miles down the lake, with four cushions and only one oar. Their families fear they are drowned.

Woman Killed by Lightning.

Zanesville, O., Oct. 18.—Mrs. Emma Johns, of Norwich, was instantly killed by lightning. The bolt ran the length of her body and burned off both shoes without injuring the remainder of her clothing.

Patience.

Her Mother—You must be patient with him. The Bride—Oh, I am. I know it will take time for him to see that he can't have his own way.

TWO BOYS SHOT BY BROTHER

Was Cleaning Rusty Gun He Did Not Know Was Loaded.

York, Pa., Oct. 18.—Two boys, Woodward and John Murphy, aged three and fourteen years respectively, were probably fatally wounded by an older brother, Frederick Murphy, nineteen years old, while they were playing on a couch at their parents' home near Manchester.

The shooting occurred while the older brother was carelessly cleaning an old rusty gun, which he did not know was loaded. Fifty shot entered the back of the youngest boy, while the fourteen-year-old lad had one of his lungs punctured.

While the parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Murphy, were entertaining their guests the oldest boy decided he would clean the old gun so he could go squirrel hunting. As he broke the barrel the trigger struck against the chair and there was a sudden discharge, his two brothers rolling from the couch unconscious.

PAYS $200 SMUGGLING FINE

Woman's Furs Brought From Europe Cause Her Some Trouble.

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 18.—On the charge of smuggling a lot of furs from Europe, Mrs. Hermine Neumann, of New York, was fined $200 by Judge Rollstab, in the United States circuit court.

Mrs. Neumann returned from her trip last week and landed the furs at Hoboken. They were not declared as part of her baggage and so were seized and she was arrested. The fine was paid.

MISSOURI RIVER LOW RATES STAND

U. S. Supreme Court Upholds Ruling of Commerce Board.

Washington, Oct. 18.—A rehearing of the Missouri River rate cases was refused by the supreme court of the United States.

As a result the order of the interstate commerce commission reducing the class rates between Mississippi river crossings and Missouri river cities, on freight originating at Atlantic seaboard points, will go into effect.

Rehearing in the so-called Denver rate case was refused. This action will allow the order of the interstate commerce commission reducing freight rates on class articles from Chicago and St. Louis to Denver to go into effect.

The court refused a rehearing in the Hertz-Woodman case, and thus the Spanish-American war tax on inheritances from testators who died in the year immediately preceding July 1, 1902, becomes collectible.

The decision of the New York federal court declining to release Frank N. Hoffstad, the Pittsburgh millionaire, from custody for removal from New York to Pennsylvania to answer to an indictment for conspiracy to bribe the city council of Pittsburgh, was affirmed.

SKELLY & WARNER

Smoking That Maddens.

Marihuana is a weed used by people of the lower class and sometimes by soldiers, but those who make larger use of it are prisoners sentenced to long terms. The use of the weed and its sale, especially in barracks and prisons, are very severely punished; yet it has many adepts, and Indian women cultivate it because they sell it at rather high prices. The dry leaves of marihuana alone or mixed with tobacco make the smoker wilder than a wild beast. It is said that immediately after the first three or four drafts of smoke smokers begin to feel a slight headache; then they see everything moving, and finally they lose all control of their mental faculties. Everything, the smokers say, takes the shape of a monster, and men look like devils. They begin to fight, and, of course, everything smashed is a monster "killed." But there are imaginary beings whom the wild man cannot kill, and these inspire fear until the man is panic stricken and runs.—Mexican Herald.

Mrs. C. W. Culp, 423 S. Washington Street, Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I have still greater faith in Doan's Kidney Pills today than when I publicly recommended them two years ago. I found them to be an excellent kidney medicine. A member of my family had kidney trouble, as the result of an attack of the measles. Backache caused much suffering and there were pains in the side which made lifting an impossibility. The kidney secretions were also too frequent in passage. Hiram's Butterfly

A Story of an Aeroplane

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

It was poised on the rolling green turf of the west meadow and with its outspread wings looked very much like a great white butterfly.

"I call it an 'air flier,'" explained Hiram Butler to the little crowd of men and women who had gathered about the machine. "I feel justly proud of her too. Made every bit myself except the engine."

"Must have cost a pretty penny," drawled James Lummock enviously. "If it'd been me I'd rather have an automobile. You can take the hull family out in one of them cars."

"It do seem sort of a selfish contraption," put in Mrs. Deacon Skinner. "For instance, suppose you wanted to take Ellen out on a Sunday afternoon. Where the land would she sit?" She peered curiously at the broad leather strap that served as the single seat in the flying machine.

"I wouldn't want to go," snapped Ellen Butler, with an angry glance at her husband. "Catch me trusting myself in the air with any man!"

All the while that her husband was demonstrating the wonders of his invention and even while he made a short experimental flight above the clover tops Ellen was thinking bitterly of the money that had gone into the useless machine. The bank account, savings of years, had been drained to its last dollar, and the mortgage which Hiram had placed on the house to get more money to perfect his patents seemed to Ellen like some huge blotch that would never be eradicated.

When the onlookers had gone away Ellen still remained, silently watching Hiram's movements about the machine. Presently he looked up, and his gaze met her hostile eyes. He straightened immediately.

"I wish you didn't feel so bitter about this, Ellen," he said soberly. "You know I wouldn't have taken the money out the bank or mortgaged the place if I didn't expect to make a hundred times as much with this invention."

"If it's a failure, Ellen," he went on quietly, "I'll take a job in the pin factory to Dodgeville till I've earned enough to put the money all back. I'll do it and run the farm too. But I'm not going to fail. Do you think I'd put that money in it if I hadn't felt pretty sure of success? I'm going up tonight too. Don't you want to see me?"

"No, I don't," Hiram Butler, and I wish you wouldn't fly over the house. The pesky thing might fall on it and knock off a chimney or come through the roof. Land knows, I'd like to keep a roof over my head even if I starve to death!" Ellen turned and proceeded toward the house without one backward glance at her husband.

Hiram stood by the machine, his shoulder drooping slightly, his broad forehead knitted thoughtfully. His brown eyes seemed to peer anxiously beyond the low lying hills as if timorous of the result of this evening's experiment. Budauet, the aviator, had an estate there, and he had promised Hiram he would buy the patent outright if the "air flier" would make a successful flight across the twenty miles of country that separated their respective homes.

Now, as he stood there in the pasture, his invention the public topic of the community, Hiram spoke as if in self defense against his neighbors' disapproval and his wife's bitter resignation.

"I may be a farmer born and bred," he said slowly, still with that farseeing glance across the hills, "and maybe that's the very reason I've invented a flying machine when I couldn't contrive a corn sheller or a mowing machine to save my life. It's the birds have done it. I've studied 'em till I believe I could almost fly myself."

The supper bell jangled noisily from the front porch, where Ellen awaited his coming. He was quick to catch the note of impatience in its brazen tongue and hastened toward the house. As he entered the kitchen his wife passed into the dining room and sat down at the table.

It was a silent meal, as had been all the meals in that house since the mortgage had rested thereon. At last Hiram pushed his plate aside and arose.

"I'm going down to the postoffice, Ellen. When I come back I'm going to make the longest flight I've ever attempted. If I succeed in getting over to Budauet's place he's promised to buy me out. You wouldn't want to come out and see me off?" He spoke a little wistfully.

Ellen's face turned obstinately away as she poured herself another cup of tea.

"Excuse me!" she said emphatically. "One nunny in the family is enough! If you get as far as the chicken house I hope you'll look up the chickens. You forgot 'em last night."

When she had cleared the table and washed the supper dishes Ellen stood in the doorway looking out into the moonlighted yard. Hiram had not yet returned from the village or else he was about to start on his strange aerial journey without coming to the house again.

business of mind. Ellen stole softly through the garden into the great pasture, which was flooded with pale moonshine. Tall, black shadowy cedars were grouped about the southern boundary, and now they were dew wet and smelled faintly aromatic.

Ellen approached the machine, which lay shrouded in its canvas blanket, and its very bigness suddenly attacked her with terror of the prospective journey and the danger that menaced her husband. She wrung her hands nervously, striving to think of some method that would deter Hiram from flying that night. Under the blue sky and sunshine it would not seem so dreadful—so dangerous.

Fifteen minutes later she was returning from the barn tugging at a long rope at the end of which a small anchor bumped over or stuck into the ground with annoying frequency. In the shadow of what she knew to be the rear of the machine Ellen peered and lifted the canvas. She surveyed the intricate machinery with a growing conviction that her husband must be deterred from making an ascension above the ground. Suppose some part should give way?

She had determined upon what essential rod she would tie the rope and thus anchor Hiram to the ground until she could by wit or will prevail upon him to give up the risky adventure, when she heard his approaching steps.

She whisked away in the shadow of the machine just in time to receive the muffling folds of canvas in a cloud upon her form. She freed her head and shoulders and crouched unseen by her husband. Carefully she examined the "air flier," trying each bolt and nut, fingering a delicate adjustment here and there, his face stern and close lipped in the light of a small frass lantern held in one hand.

Then he moved forward; there was the heavy chugging of the engine, and Ellen's heart almost stopped still. In another instant it would be too late to detain him—he would be out of her reach, beyond her touch, and he could not hear her plea for pardon.

It had flown above the house. Ellen darted desperately forward, groped for and found the anchor, tied the rope hastily and clumsily to the nearest projecting rod, paused to tie the other end, square knot before jamming the flukes on the anchor into the soft turf.

With a whirling rush the machine started down the slope, the wheels revolving dizzily. The anchor whipped after, and somehow Ellen's hands closed desperately about the flukes, and then she felt herself rising upward with terrifying velocity.

Clutching the anchor, Ellen swept up with the machine very much like the tail to a gigantic kite. She heard Hiram's voice swearing vigorously, and she felt no horror. She closed her eyes tightly and held on. Her feet brushed treetops once or twice, and she knew she was above the cedar grove. Then one foot tangled in some crooked branch, and she lost her hold on the anchor. With a frightened cry she fell into the embracing arms of the close limbed cedars. Through an aperture in the branches she saw the air flier dart upward and away through the moonlight, the anchor dangling like a twisted thread, until the noise of the engine died away and all was still.

Cradled in the treetops, Ellen dared not stir for fear of falling. She was a slight woman, and she had fallen snugly into strong branches that curved upward like the ribs of a ship. Her hands were torn and bleeding, her face was scratched, and her twisted ankle pained horribly. But above all was the agony of belief that her husband had gone forth into space and would never return.

Too wretched to cry aloud more than once, she huddled, cold and stiff, through the long hours of the night. Owls hooted unpleasantly near, whippoorwills thrashed in the thickets, and all around were the sleepy twitter of birds and the soft brush of wind in the trees.

She must have fallen asleep, for the sound of her name called in Hiram's stentorian tones awakened her to pale daylight. There was anxious terror in his voice.

"Here I am," she called feebly, and then louder, until at last he came wonderingly to her rescue. It was not until they were within the house and she had sobbed out her wretchedness on his breast that Hiram spoke soothingly.

"Do you know what you did, Ellen Butler?" he asked. "I was in doubt about making a successful flight, but I didn't know what was the matter with the machine. That there anchor was the additional weight that balanced her perfectly. Whatever saved it from catching in the trees I don't know. It was a clear case of Providence all through, I guess, for you had a narrow escape. That there anchor sold the machine, Ellen, for without it I couldn't have got to Budauet's. As it is, it's sold for enough to raise the mortgage and make us pretty independent besides." He yawned sleepily and stretched himself.

"It's done more than that, Hiram," said Ellen gently, the tears shining in her penitent eyes.

"What's that?" he asked. And then, looking down into her upturned face, he kissed her and smiling whimsically, answered his own query. "Settled the first and last quarrel we ever had, eh?"

Ellen nodded assent. "And shows that even the tail of a kite may be useful." She shuddered a little at the recollection of her perilous flight, and Hiram paled suddenly as he stooped toward her. And then in the moment of reconciliation they forgot the white butterfly and the fortune it had made for them.

FARMING IN NEW MEXICO.

Account of a Visit to the Pecos Valley by a Well Known Granger.

Mr. George T. Powell of Orchard farm, Ghent, N. Y., agricultural specialist and a member of Chatham Grange, No. 900, has recently returned from a trip through New Mexico, where he has been selecting farms for several young men from New York state—college graduates who, while their own land is being broken for planting, have hired out to farmers to learn their methods. Some of these have paid $500 an acre for fruit orchards, and they will get $1,200 per acre from the fruit trees the second year after buying their land.

Mr. Powell tells about one farmer who has just stored his wool crop of 300,000 pounds, for which he has a standing offer of $54,000. But fruit growing is the most profitable branch to farmers in the section where Mr. Powell visited. As Roswell, N. M., has an elevation of 3,600 feet the quality of the fruit raised on these high altitude orchards is excellent.

Some of these orchards contain as many as 500 acres, but smaller ones not exceeding fifty acres are the more profitable on account of the better care that can be given them. Mr. Powell says that every orchardist has to spray his trees, and if he fails to do so they are sprayed by the association and the cost is added to his taxes. Irrigation is practiced four times a year. Some times the frost hits the trees pretty hard while in bloom, but most of the large growers have smudge pots, and when the signal service bureau notifies them of a coming frost they fill these pots with crude oil, setting from 100 to 150 pots to the acre and burning them all night long. Each of these pots holds a gallon of crude oil, costing 4 cents. The cost of smudging is $18 to $27 per acre for the pots and $20 for the oil and labor for three nights.

Mr. Powell gives an interesting description of the process of irrigation there. Roswell is in the Pecos valley, and the ever melting snow on the mountain tops gives a great flow of water, which, sinking under ground, sometimes forms vast lakes in the valley, the water table of which lies sometimes as low as 1,500 feet below the surface. From an occasional large stream or even small lake that is situated near the surface ditches conduct the water over 1,000 acres of land sometimes, but in most cases eight inch pipe is sunk down to the subterranean supply and a flow of 1,000 to 35,000 gallons per minute is obtained. Mr. Powell says that he has seen a yield of 110 bushels of oats and 140 bushels of corn to the acre on irrigated land.

Alfalfa is grown there with great success, and at the time Mr. Powell visited Roswell three crops had been cut, and three more will be taken from the same fields. Many farms yield a ton and a half per acre and the good farms from two and a half to three tons per acre. At that time over 200,000 tons of alfalfa were shipped over the adjoining fields streams of water were flowing, and these fields in less than thirty days would grow another crop. Alfalfa brings $10 a ton in the storehouses. As soon as the alfalfa is cut fifty to a hundred horses and mules are turned in from distant pastures to clean the field, and sometimes as many cattle are run in. After they have been in the pasture for a week or so the water is turned on for several days. Roswell is a town of 10,000 population, and the farmers of that vicinity have $3,000,000 in the banks and they loan to Wall street.

OHIO'S GRANGE DAY.

Interesting Talks at State Fair on Occasion of Grange Reunion.

An exceptional program was that presented by the Ohio state grange during state fair week at Columbus. O. State Master Laylin Leslie, State Secretary Strode reported on his membership in the state since the state fair meeting of a year ago. 4,800 and losses of 1,580, leaving a net gain of 3,214. Among the speakers were Governor Harmon, who discussed the subject of taxation; President McFarland of the state board of agriculture, Atlee Pomerene, running mate of the governor; State Master Hull of Michigan, Past Master Ladd of Massachusetts, Past Master Smith of Ohio, R. W. Dunlap, dairy and food commissioner; R. L. Holman, Ohio's grand old man of the grange, and State Lecturer Taber.

Secretary Strode says that the best program and the smallest attendance in ten years tells the story of the grange reunion this year. The program reflected the increased interest and better thought incident to greater activity in grange work, while the attendance reflected the effects of the Columbus street car strike and bad weather. As it was, several hundred grangers registered and were presented with a beautiful golden silk ribbon, which distinguished the wearers from the unorganized farmer and city dweller. It was decided to hold the next state meeting at Zanesville Dec. 13-15.

LIFE NOT WORTHY LIVING

Is the way Miss Alta Abel, of West Baden, Ind., summed up her existence after having sought in vain for health. She writes, "I was a complete wreck—always tired, worn out and nervous. I had to spend about one-third of my time in bed, and my life was not worth living."

"Vinol, your delicious cod liver and iron tonic, was recommended, and I can truly say it has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took in my life. That nervous and tired feeling is all gone. I have gained in health, flesh and strength, until I feel like another person." (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

What Vinol did for Miss Abel, we know it will do for every nervous, run-down, overworked, tired, thin and discouraged woman in this vicinity.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. People's Drug Store, C. Wm. Beales, prop., Gettysburg, Pa.
